

O'Doc was originally developed to enable us to offer multi user capabilities to our MoneyWorks customers back in the days when MoneyWorks was only available as a single user product.

Almost by accident we discovered that many businesses liked the concept of separating their day to day customer and stock related activities from their administration, banking and financial reporting. Plus giving the freedom for these activities to happen in different and/or multiple locations.

They also soon came to appreciate that we were able to focus our development almost exclusively on the business activities that helped them make their money, rather than the more traditional accounting premise of advising how you spent it.

The advent of multi user MoneyWorks has strengthened our market presence rather than diminished it, and allowed us to focus even more on our areas of speciality and helping those businesses work smarter.